1. What is European Literature?

- European Literature refers to the literary pieces particularly in the continent Europe. It is also known as Western Literature, created in the setting of Western culture in the languages of Europe and is affected by the periods in which they were created, with each period featuring notable western authors, poets, and works of literature.

European literature refers to the literature in many languages, among the most important of the modern written works are those in English, Spanish, French, Dutch, Polish, German, Italian, Modern Greek, Czech, Russian, Bosnian and works by the Scandinavians and Irish.

2. Who are some of the important writers in European Literature?

- One of the important writers is Jean-Jacques Rousseau. He was one of the most significant and influential in eighteenth-century European Enlightenment. Considered as his most important work is The Emile or On Education is essentially a work that details Rousseau's philosophy of education. It is a highly significant work of non-fiction that promotes a broad and liberal education as a method of producing or raising up ethical citizens.

Franz Kafka is another important writer in the European Literature, he was a prominent German language novelist and short story writer whose distinctive body of writing has become a defining element in Western literature. Kafka's writing captures the fundamental absurdity of contemporary life, particularly the sinister bureaucracy and capitalism. His works influenced the thoughts of most people and contributed to the principles of existentialism.

3. What are the different literary periods in European Literature?

There are 7 different literary periods, these are 1. Medieval period (500-1500), 2. Age of Enlightenment (1700-1800), 3. Romantic Movement (1798-1870), 4. Realism (1820-1920), 5. Naturalism (1870-1920), 6. existentialist (1850-present), 7. Modernist Period (1910-1965)

4. How did European Literature originate?

- According to Britannica, the majority of the historical European literary heritage comes from ancient Greece and Rome. Christianity helped maintained, refined, and disseminated it, which is how it made its way into the vernacular languages of the Western Continent, and other places where Europeans had colonized.

In addition, as stated in the book A History of European Literature by Walter Cohen, The development of European literature can be traced back to the Classical languages of antiquity (ancient past), which are the inheritors of the rich Afro-Eurasia heritage, which existed before the creation of Europe.
