

BACTERIA AND VIRUSES

GUIDED NOTES

10 BACTERIA

Definition: Bacteria are single-celled microorganisms that are found everywhere. They are the smallest and simplest of all organisms and can be found in almost every environment. They are made up of a single cell and can live in a variety of environments, including soil, water, and the human body.

CLASSIFYING BACTERIA

Bacteria are classified into three groups based on their shape: cocci (spherical), bacilli (rod-shaped), and spirilla (spiral-shaped). They are also classified based on their arrangement, such as chains, pairs, or clusters.

STRUCTURE

Bacteria have a cell wall that provides structural support and protection. They also have a cell membrane and cytoplasm. Some bacteria have flagella, which are long, thin, hair-like structures that help them move.

REPRODUCTION

Bacteria reproduce asexually through binary fission. The cell grows and then divides into two daughter cells. This process is rapid and allows bacteria to multiply quickly.

11 VIRUSES

Definition: Viruses are tiny particles that can only be seen with an electron microscope. They are made of genetic material (DNA or RNA) surrounded by a protein coat called a capsid. Some viruses have an outer layer called a envelope.

CLASSIFYING VIRUSES

Viruses are classified based on the type of genetic material they contain (DNA or RNA) and the shape of their capsid. They can be further classified based on the host they infect, such as animal viruses, plant viruses, and bacteriophages.

STRUCTURE

Viruses have a simple structure consisting of a central core of genetic material and an outer shell called a capsid. Some viruses have a tail-like structure called a tail that helps them attach to host cells.

REPRODUCTION

Viruses reproduce by attaching to a host cell and injecting their genetic material into it. The host cell then produces new virus particles, which can then infect other cells.
