

automated and automated equipment and systems that support logistics and make the supply chain work.

Materials handling is the movement of raw goods from their native site to the point of use in manufacturing, their subsequent manipulation in production processes, and the transfer of finished products from factories and their distribution to users or sales outlets.

QUESTION: What is transportation?

Transportation is the movement of goods and persons from place to place and the various means by which such movement is accomplished. The growth of the ability—and the need—to transport large quantities of goods or numbers of people over long distances at high speeds in comfort and safety has been an index of civilization and in particular of technological progress.

QUESTION: What is supply chain flow cycle?

Supply chain the sequence of process and flows that take place within and between different stages and combine to fulfil and customer need for product.

A simplistic representation of a supply chain involves a sequence between five stages, from suppliers to the final customer. Each of these stages has its own cycle, which is a sequence of operations and transactions taking place between two stages.

- A customer order cycle takes place when orders are processed, prepared, and shipped. For retail, the customer is often picking his order from the store inventory (shelves), which represents the point of final demand. In a pull logistics system, customer order cycles are particularly important since they are the driver of further cycles upstream of the supply chain.
- The replenishment cycle concerns the steps involved to re-supply outlets from distribution centers and wholesalers. Each outlet places orders to distributors based upon its own fluctuation of the demand. It involves inventory that has already been manufactured and stored in different locations and parts of the supply chain.
- The manufacturing cycle concerns the scheduling of production in light of the demand from distributors.
- The procurement cycle involves the scheduling of the components required in the manufacturing of a good.
