Unit 3 – Assessment of the Skin, Hair, and Nails – 11 Questions

Topic	Location	Student Notes
Structure & Function of the Skin, Hair, and Nails Layers of the Skin The skin has two layers, the epidermis, and the dermis. An underlying layer, the subcutaneous layer (or hypodermis), is sometimes included in descriptions as the third layer of the skin. Functions of Skin and Mucous Membranes • Protection • Temperature regulation • Psychosocial • Sensation • Vitamin D production • Immunologic • Absorption • Elimination	NSG121.05.01.01 Epidermis: Top layer or outermost portion • Composed of layers of stratified epithelial cells. • These cells fuse to form a protective, waterproof layer of keratin material. • Epithelial cells have no blood vessels of their own and depend on underlying tissues for nourishment and waste removal. Dermis: Second layer of skin • Consists of a framework of elastic connective tissue composed primarily of collagen. • Nerves, hair follicles, glands, immune cells, and blood vessels are located in this layer. • Each hair consists of the shaft, which projects through the dermis (beyond the surface of the skin, and the hair follicle, which lies in the dermis.	Subcutaneous Tissue • Dermis rests on the subcutaneous tissue • The underlying layer that anchors the skin layers to the underlying tissues of the body. • The subcutaneous tissue consists of adipose tissue, made up of lobules of fat cells, and connective tissue. • This layer stores fat for energy, serves as a heat insulator for the body, and provides a cushioning effect for protection. • This fatty tissue layer contains blood and lymph vessels, nerves, and fat cells.
Integumentary a. Medical History and Risk Factors: Risk assessment identifies areas of concern and provides direction for patient education. Extensive UV radiation is the most important focus area for the integumentary system because exposure to it has been shown to cause skin cancers, particularly melanoma. b. Health promotion: The process of enabling people to increase control over, and to improve, their health. >What are the 3 types of health promotion? Primary: Secondary: Tertiary:	NSG121.05.02.01 (x2) Healthy People goals for integumentary health are as follows: • Reduce the rate of melanoma cancer deaths. • Increase the proportion of persons who use at least one of the following protective measures that may reduce the risk of skin cancer: avoid the sun between 10 am and 4 pm, wear sun-protective clothing when exposed to sunlight, use sunscreen, and avoid artificial sources of UV light	Skin findings indicating severe dehydration, cyanosis, or impaired skin integrity (acute lacerations, burns, and tissue injury) require prompt evaluation and intervention with fluids, oxygen administration, skin repair, or a combination. Most skin findings are not emergent, but you must report them to other health care providers for further evaluation and management. Urgent Assessment Acute trauma and burns may require immediate attention, depending on severity. With large lacerations, you must control bleeding and then work with colleagues to manage the wound. Patients with burns can lose large amounts of fluid through their wounds, so rapid fluid replacement is a necessity. Both large wounds and burns are urgent and potentially life-threatening situations that require advanced and sometimes complex treatment plans and interventions.
Subjective Data Collection Signs/Symptoms 1) Pruritus (itching) 2) Rash (multiple lesions) 3) Single lesion or wounds 4) Older adults 5) Cultural considerations	NSG121.05.02.02 >During subjective data collection, you have the opportunity to integrate health teaching with history taking. For the integumentary system, a major focus of such teaching relates to prevention of skin cancers, including melanoma. >The ABCDEs of melanoma detection include Asymmetry, Border Irregularity, Color, Diameter of more than 6 mm, and Evolution of the lesion over time.	Common Integumentary Symptoms • Pruritus • Rash (multiple lesions) • Single lesion or wound The nurse focuses the client's subjective reports on pertinent and important skin issues. Common integumentary symptoms include pruritus, rash, lesions, or wounds.  The Skin Cancer Foundation, Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, and Academy of Dermatology all recommend SPF of 30 or greater. Sunscreen should be broad-spectrum to provide protection against ultraviolet B (UVB) and ultraviolet A (UVA).
Objective Data Collection - Skin Alterations 11.Comprehensive Assessment Techniques: First, assess the overall skin appearance and inspect the face and exposed skin surfaces for color and pigmentation. 12.Primary lesions: Arise from previously normal skin and include macules, papules, nodules, tumors, polyps, wheals, blisters, cysts, pustules, vesicles, and abscesses. a. Secondary lesions: lesions follow primary lesions (e.g., scar tissue, crusts from dried burns) b. Older adults: Common skin assessment findings include decreased elasticity, thinness, excessive dryness, and lesions associated with aging, such as telangiectic keratosis, actinic keratosis, and lentigenes. c. Cultural considerations: Natural products such as coconut oil or olive oil may be used on the skin and hair, but others use conditioning shampoos, creamy pomades, or sheen spray. Some people bathe in the morning, whereas others bathe at night.	NSG121.05.03.01 (x2) Primary lesions may be further described as non-elevated, elevated-solid, or fluid-filled. Nodule: Solid, palpable, less than 1 cm diameter, often with some depth. Vesicle: Herpes simplex, chicken pox. Wheal: Raised, flesh-colored, or red edematous papules or plaques; vary in size and shape. Pustule: Acne, folliculitis. If a patient cannot help with the movement, additional help may be necessary to position the patient safely. Turn the bedbound patient to visualize all body	 Bedbound patients require frequent detailed inspection of dependent areas, especially bony prominences, to detect early evidence of skin breakdown. Additionally, it is important to evaluate skin folds for infection or irritation, especially under the breasts, in the groin, and in the abdominal pannus (skin fold most commonly found in obese patients or patients who have had extreme weight loss). Individual lesions may be generally categorized as primary or secondary.  Seborrheic dermatoses appear during the 40s and 50s as lesions with variable color (black, tan, flesh-colored, pink, and blue), and a texture that is velvety to verrucous (wart-like). They are found over all parts of the body (except the palms and bottom of feet). They have a waxy “stick-on” characteristic. In addition, older adults are at increased risk for skin cancer, abnormal ecchymoses or purpura lesions, and trauma.  More than half of all patients are likely to self-treat a skin lesion or dermatitis with what is culturally familiar to them before seeking assistance from a health care professional. Inquiring about cultural practices and home remedies provides insight into the patient's specific culture and assists in designing appropriately sensitive therapeutic interventions.
