

RESEARCH DESIGN

The image displays a collection of mathematical reference materials. On the left, there is a large table with multiple columns and rows of numbers, likely a multiplication or division table. To the right of this, there is a smaller table with similar numerical data. At the bottom right, a large table is visible, which appears to be a table of logarithms or trigonometric values, given the presence of decimal points and the layout of the numbers. The overall appearance is that of a scanned page from a mathematical handbook or a collection of reference cards.
