Objectives:

- Describe the gross structure of the spinal cord, including the arrangement of its gray matter and white matter.

The gray matter is in the inner region of the spinal cord surrounded by white matter.

White matter is composed into 3 types: Ascending, descending, and Commissural.

Divided into 3 funiculi (dorsal, ventral, and lateral)

Gray matter made of neuron cell bodies. Gray commissure is the narrow central cavity of the central canal. Dorsal and ventral horns. Lateral horns. Organized functionally.

Dorsal horns consist of interneurons. Interneurons receive info from sensory neurons whose cell bodies lie outside the spinal cord in dorsal root ganglia and reach the spinal cord via dorsal root. Ventral horns contain cell bodies of motor neurons and send their axons out the spinal cord via ventral roots.

- Describe the meningeal coverings surrounding the spinal cord and explain how the meninges and cerebrospinal fluid protect the structures of the central nervous system: Superficial → deep : dura mater, arachnoid, pia mater. Meninges cover and protect the CNS. Enclose and protect the BVs that supply the CNS, contain CSF.

Dura mater: strongest and is made of dense fibrous CT. Superficial periosteal layer attaches to skull and meningeal layer forms true cover of brain. The two layers fuse together and are separated to enclose the dural venous sinuses. The dural sinus collects blood from the brain and conducts it to the jugular veins of the neck. Limits movement of brain within the cranium. Breaks up into 3 partitions. Falx cerebri: lies in longitudinal fissure. Falx cerebelli and tentorium.

Arachnoid mater: between arachnoid and dura mater is subdural space with film of fluid. Called potential space because it can fill with substantial fluid or blood when injured. Deep to arachnoid is subarachnoid space that hold arachnoid mater to pia mater. Also is filled with CSF and contains largest BVs supply to the brain. Arachnoid villi are over the superior part of the brain that project thru the dura mater and act as valves to allow CSF from the subarachnoid space to the dural venous sinuses.

Organs-on-a-Chip and Organoids Technologies Qasem Ramadan,Massimo Alberti,Martin Dufva,Yi-Chung

Tung,2019-10-16 Recent developments in microfluidics have demonstrated enormous potential of microscale cell culture for biology studies and recognized as instrumental in performing rapid and efficient experiments on small sample volumes

Microfluidic based cell culture is an area of research that keeps growing and gaining importance as a prominent technology able to link scientific disciplines with industrial and clinical applications In particular organotypic cell culture and its integration in microfluidic devices would enable the realization of in vivo like cell microenvironment within systems that are more amenable to automation and integration Such remarkable advancement forms the foundation and motivation to transfer research from the laboratory to the field Although the microfluidics and cell culture technologies have influenced many areas of science significant research efforts are currently focus on finding methods to transform drug screening and toxicity testing from a system reliant on high dose animal studies to one based primarily on human relevant in vitro models In line with regulatory developments precluding the use of animal testing as well as fundamental differences in animal versus human human in vitro methodologies are required to replace the animal based testes while permitting physiologically relevant model equivalents for superior prediction Organs on a chip is an ambitious and rapidly growing technology that promise to bridge the gap between in vivo and in vitro studies and open wide possibilities in medical and industrial applications However many challenges are still ahead This eBook present recent state of the art works and critical reviews in organs on a chip technology which highlight the new advances in this growing field with an emphasis on the interface between technological advancements and high impact applications
