The Helsinki group, not presenting the data, holds the view that they constituted an ad hoc group of like-minded Polish firms.

11. Do you believe that the literature suggested the experiment is feasible and worth conducting? (Yes/No)

These studies show that perceptions of stigma and social risk perceptions were consistently elevated. The authors also suggest that the stigmatization of people with HIV/AIDS may be a consequence of the complex characteristics of the illness. The following key messages are a good example of the stigmatization of people with HIV/AIDS: "This is a life-threatening disease," says of their perceptions of the illness and state that "Stigmatization about it" was considered a negative social consequence.²¹
