Improving Our Competitiveness United States. Congress. House. Committee on Education and Labor, 2010 Improving Working Memory in Learning and Intellectual Disabilities Silvia Lanfranchi, Barbara Carretti, 2016-08-05 The last forty years of research have demonstrated that working memory WM is a key concept for understanding higher order cognition To give an example WM is involved in reading comprehension problem solving and reasoning but also in a number of everyday life activities It has a clear role in the case of atypical development too For instance numerous studies have shown an impairment in WM in individuals with learning disabilities LD or intellectual disabilities ID and several researchers have hypothesized that this can be linked to their difficulties in learning cognition and everyday life The latest challenge in the field concerns the trainability of WM If it is a construct central to our understanding of cognition in typical and atypical development then specific intervention to sustain WM performance might also promote changes in cognitive processes associated with WM The idea that WM can be modified is debated however partly because of the theoretical implications of this view and partly due to the generally contradictory results obtained so far In fact most studies converge in demonstrating specific effects of WM training i e improvements in the trained tasks but few transfer effects to allied cognitive processes are generally reported It is worth noting that any maintenance effects when investigated are even more meagre In addition a number of methodological concerns have been raised in relation to the use of 1 single tasks to assess the effects of a training program 2 WM tasks differing from those used in the training to assess the effects of WM training and 3 passive control groups These and other crucial issues have so far prevented any conclusions from being drawn on the efficacy of WM training Bearing in mind that the opportunity to train WM could have a huge impact in the educational and clinical settings it seems fundamentally important to shed more light on the limits and potential of this line of research The aim of the research discussed here is to generate new evidence on the feasibility of training WM in individuals with LD and ID There are several questions that could be raised in this field For a start can WM be trained in this population Are there some aspects of WM that can be trained more easily than others Can a WM training reduce the impact of LD and ID on learning outcomes and on everyday living What kind of training program is best suited to the promotion of such changes Resources in Education ,2001-10 Science & Engineering Indicators ,2002 Expanding the Numerical Central Conceptual Structure Laura Christine Bofferding, 2011 In working with integers students have difficulties that may extend into middle school and even adulthood However even young children can display insights into negative numbers well before receiving formal instruction

Using a pre test instruction post test design this study explores how 61 first graders reason about negative number properties and operations and how their understanding changes depending on the instruction they receive Results of the study indicate that children build on their existing whole number understanding to develop a central conceptual structure for integers Furthermore the process by which they extend their numerical central conceptual structure differs among students their initial schemas together with the form of the integer instruction influence how they reason about and solve integer addition and subtraction problems These results highlight the need to revisit the placement duration and content of integer instruction in curricula

Computing and Computer-Assisted Intervention - MICCAI 2002 Takeyoshi Dohi,Ron Kikins,2003-06-30 The fifth international Conference in Medical Image Computing and Computer Assisted Intervention MICCAI 2002 was held in Tokyo from September 25th to 28th 2002 This was the first time that the conference was held in Asia since its foundation in 1998 The objective of the conference is to offer clinicians and scientists the opportunity to collaboratively create and explore the new medical field Specifically MICCAI offers a forum for the discussion of the state of art in computer assisted interventions medical robotics and image processing among experts from multi disciplinary professions including but not limited to clinical doctors computer scientists and mechanical and biomedical engineers The expectations of society are very high the advancement of medicine will depend on computer and device technology in coming decades as they did in the last decades We received 321 manuscripts of which 41 were chosen for oral presentation and 143 for poster presentation Each paper has been included in these proceedings in eight page full paper format without any differentiation between oral and poster papers Adherence to this full paper format along with the increased number of manuscripts surpassing all our expectations has led us to issue two proceedings volumes for the first time in MICCAI s history Keeping to a single volume by assigning fewer pages to each paper was certainly an option for us considering our budget constraints However we decided to increase the volume to offer authors maximum opportunity to argue the state of art in their work and to initiate constructive discussions among the MICCAI audience
