Reciprocal Learning for Cross-Cultural Mathematics Education Sijia Cynthia Zhu, Shu Xie, Yunpeng Ma, Douglas McDougall, 2020-12-15 This edited volume examines new ways of teaching mathematics through a cross cultural reciprocal learning project between sister schools in Canada and China. Situating teacher learning in the intersection of the two different school systems, curriculums and cultures of mathematics learning and teaching in both nations, this volume offers teachers a unique and much needed perspective on how practices between countries become more and more likely shaped by each other in the emerging global society. Born out of a comparative study project sponsored by the SSHRC, this volume compiles five years worth of findings from reciprocal partnerships between researchers, teachers, school administrators and students from both nations. Through the process of reciprocal learning and narrative inquiry, the research described in these chapters illuminates the unknown and shares newly created mathematics education knowledge. West-East Reciprocal Learning in Teacher Education Shijing Xu, Yibing Liu, Zuochen Zhang, Michael Connelly, Chenkai Chi, 2024-10-21 During this uncertain time, teacher education has never been more needed for West-East dialogues and Reciprocal Learning. Xu and Connelly's concept of reciprocal learning aims to harmonize the West-East dichotomy and foster appreciation in education and understanding of each other's culture and history. This book focuses on the field work done by the Teacher Education Research Team with chapter contributors from Canadian and Chinese professors, graduate students and pre-service teachers who have been deeply engaged in the RLP. Following Xu and Connelly's conceptual framework of Reciprocal Learning as Collaborative Partnership, the book begins with knowing the Teacher Education RLP followed by doing the West-East reciprocal learning through the program. It concludes with a discussion of the envisioned future of the RLP and commentaries from distinguished scholars in teacher education, one from the West and the other from the East. Educating for Citizenship in a Canada-China Sister School Reciprocal Learning Partnership Yishin Khoo, 2022-12-13 This book enriches the discourse around Global Citizenship Education in teacher education through the example of a teacher's experience in a Canada-China Sister School reciprocal learning landscape. Instead of positioning global citizenship teaching and learning as a set of fixed goals to be attained by teachers alone, this book approaches global citizenship teaching and learning as unfinished lifework in progress and as situated curriculum problems to be inquired together by university researchers, school teachers and students under the spirit of reciprocity and community. This reimagining of narratives, theory and action starts from collaborative and reciprocal learning partnerships among Chinese and Canadian researchers and teachers in the practicality of re-searching and re-enacting the purpose and meanings of twenty-first century education in a Canada-China Sister School setting. Sharing the Land, Sharing a Future Katherine Graham, David Newhouse, 2021-06-11 Sharing the Land Sharing a Future looks to both the past and the future as it examines the foundational work of the Royal Commission on Aboriginal Peoples RCAP and the legacy of its 1996 report It assesses the Commission's influence on subsequent milestones in Indigenous Canada relations and considers our prospects for a constructive future RCAP's five year examination of the relationships of First Nations Metis and Inuit peoples to Canada and to non Indigenous Canadians resulted in a new vision for Canada and provided 440 specific recommendations many of which informed the subsequent work of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission of Canada TRC Considered too radical and difficult to implement RCAP's recommendations were largely ignored but the TRC reiterates that longstanding inequalities and imbalances in Canada's relationship with Indigenous peoples remain and quite literally calls us to action With reflections on RCAP's legacy by its co-chairs, leaders of national Indigenous organizations and the Minister of Crown Indigenous Relations and leading academics and activists. This collection refocuses our attention on the groundbreaking work already performed by RCAP. Organized thematically, it explores avenues by which we may establish a new relationship, build healthy and powerful communities, engage citizens and move to action.

Magnetoencephalography: an emerging neuroimaging tool for studying normal and abnormal human brain development Christos Papadelis, Patricia Ellen Grant, Yoshio Okada, Hubert Preissl, 2015-10-12

Research on the human brain development has seen an upturn in the past years, mostly due to novel neuroimaging tools that became available to study the anatomy and function of the developing brain. Magnetic Resonance Imaging (MRI) and Diffusion Tensor Imaging (DTI) are beginning to be used more frequently in children to determine the gross anatomy and structural connectivity of their brain. Functional MRI and Near Infrared Spectroscopy (NIRS) determine the hemodynamics, and electroencephalography (EEG) the electrophysiological functions of the developing human brain. Magnetoencephalography (MEG) complements EEG as the only other technique capable of directly measuring the developing brain electrophysiology. Although MEG is still being used relatively rarely in pediatric studies, the recent development in this technology is beginning to demonstrate its utility in both basic and clinical neurosciences. MEG seems to be quite attractive for pediatric use since it measures the human brain activity in an entirely passive manner without possessing any conceivable risk to the developing tissue. MEG sessions generally require minimal patient preparation, and the recordings are extremely well tolerated from children. Biomagnetic techniques also offer an indirect way to assess the functional brain and heart activity of fetuses in humans in utero by measuring the magnetic field outside the maternal abdomen. Magnetic field produced by the electrical activity in the heart and brain of the fetus is not attenuated by the vernix, a waxy film covering its entire skin. A biomagnetic instrument specifically designed for fetal studies has been developed for this purpose. Fetal MEG studies using such a system have shown that both spontaneous brain activity and evoked cortical activity can be measured from outside the abdomen of pregnant mothers. Fetal MEG may become clinically very useful for implementation and evaluation of intervention programs in at-risk populations. Biomagnetic instruments have also been developed for specifically measuring the brain activity in newborns, infants, and older children. MEG studies have shown the usefulness of MEG for localizing active regions in the brain and also for tracking the longitudinal maturation of various sensory systems. Studies of pediatric patients are beginning to show interesting functional pathology in autism spectrum disorder, cerebral palsy, epilepsy, and other types of neurological and psychiatric disorders, Down syndrome, traumatic brain injury, Tourette syndrome, hearing deficits, childhood migraine. In this eBook, we compile the state of the art MEG and other neuroimaging studies focused on the pediatric population in both health and disease. We believe a review of the recent studies of human brain development using MEG is quite timely since we are witnessing advances not only in the instrumentation optimized for the pediatric population but also in the research based on various types of MEG systems designed for both human fetuses in utero and neonates and older children
