

Answer:

Friction is a force that opposes motion in all contacted surfaces. This will occur with particles (eg. vehicles) experiencing its greatest opposing resistance when direction starts changing and sliding occurs. Friction follows in the opposite direction from motion. But what acts against sliding? Rolling resistance is the friction between two moving surfaces.

1. Calculating Motion

In the illustration above, a force (F) is applied to an object. Friction is opposing motion (F_f). Show how:

1. Net force is zero and stays

2. Net force is not zero (F_{net}) and the object has acceleration

There is also opposition for sliding motion:

Friction:

$$\text{Friction force is } F_f = \mu F_N \quad \text{Coefficient of friction} \quad \text{Normal force } F_N$$

In this question:

• F_N is the normal force

• μ is coefficient of friction

• F_f is friction force (force opposing motion)

Example: A block starts sliding with velocity v against friction. Friction force is F_f and direction is F_f (opposite direction, opposite to the block sliding)

$$\begin{aligned} F_f &= \mu F_N \\ F_f &= \mu mg \\ F_f &= 0.5 \times 10 \text{ N} \end{aligned}$$

In addition, block F_f must be greater than 0.5N.

2. Static Friction

Friction produces with any pressure between the following way: When there is a pressure of force is applied. But on the block with the current constant resistance.

1. A large push of force was applied to a surface that could not move. The pressure was not enough. Friction is the resistance of the surface to the force is 0.5N. If the surface is not enough to move the surface.
