Hoyle, Carolyn Temple Adger, 1998 Between early childhood and adulthood language acquisition is succeeded by a bloom of repertoire for managing interaction a growing sensitivity to the relation of language and society an expanding ability to wield power through the strategic use of language and an increasing sophistication in framing speech activities This book examines a wide range of language practices among school age children and teenagers using data from naturally occurring recorded talk and from careful observation of interaction in peer groups The contributors analyze talk at play at school and at work documenting the growing communicative skills of young people while always focusing on what young speakers themselves do with and through language. Theoretical constructs to which the contributors appeal include Goffman's notion of footing and Hymes' communicative competence as well as multiple characterizations of discourse structure. The chapters show older children as strategic language users, dynamic actors who are often concerned with defining themselves as a distinctive group different from adults yet who just as often display proficiency at sophisticated discourse activities that presage those of adulthood.

Child Development Catherine S. Steen Tamis-LeMonda (Steffie van der Duff, Hester), 2025

Socialization: Parent-Child Interaction in Everyday Life Sara Keel, 2016-03-17 Adopting a conversation analytic approach informed by ethnomethodology this book examines the process of socialization as it takes place within everyday parent-child interactions. Based on a large audio-visual corpus featuring footage of families filmed extensively in their homes the author focuses on the initiation of interactive assessment sequences on the part of young children with their parents and the manner in which by means of embodied resources such as talk, gaze and gesture they acquire communicative skills and a sense of themselves as effective social actors. With attention to the responses of parents and their understanding of their children's participation in exchanges and the implications of these for children's communication this book sheds new light on the ways in which parents and children achieve shared understanding how they deal with matters of alignment or disalignment and issues related to their respective membership categories. As a rigorous and detailed study of children's early socialization as well as the structural and embodied organization of communicative sequences Socialization: Parent-Child Interaction in Everyday Life will appeal to scholars of sociology and child development with interests in ethnomethodology and conversation analysis, early years socialization and the sociology of family life.

The Acquisition of Complex Morphology William Forshaw, 2021-10-15 Many theories of language acquisition struggle to account for the morphological complexity and diversity of the world's languages. This book examines the acquisition of complex morphology of Murrinhpatha, a polysynthetic language of Northern Australia. It considers semi-naturalistic data from five children (1;9.6.1) collected over a two-year period. Analysis of the Murrinhpatha data is focused on the acquisition of polysynthetic verb constructions, large irregular inflectional paradigms, and bipartite stem verbs, which all pose interesting challenges to the learner as well as to theories of language acquisition. The book argues that morphological complexity, which broadly includes factors such as transparency, predictability, regularity, richness, type, token frequency, and productivity, must become central to our understanding of morphological acquisition. It seeks to understand how acquisition is impacted by differences in morphological systems and by the ways in which children and their interlocutors use these systems.
