Studies of Skin Color in the Early Royal Society Cristina Malcolmson, 2016-04-01 Arguing that the early Royal Society moved science toward racialization by giving skin color a new prominence as an object of experiment and observation Cristina Malcolmson provides the first book length examination of studies of skin color in the Society She also brings new light to the relationship between early modern literature science and the establishment of scientific racism in the nineteenth century Malcolmson demonstrates how unstable the idea of race remained in England at the end of the seventeenth century and yet how extensively the intertwined institutions of government colonialism the slave trade and science were collaborating to usher it into public view Malcolmson places the genre of the voyage to the moon in the context of early modern discourses about human difference and argues that Cavendish s Blazing World and Swift s Gulliver s Travels satirize the Society s emphasis on skin color Britannica Student Encyclopedia Encyclopaedia Britannica, Inc, 2014-05-01 Entertaining and informative the newly updated Britannica Student Encyclopedia helps children gain a better understanding of their world Updated for 2015 more than 2 250 captivating articles cover everything from Barack Obama to video games Children are sure to immerse themselves in 2 700 photos charts and tables that help explain concepts and subjects as well as 1 200 maps and flags from across the globe Britannica Student is curriculum correlated and a recent winner of the 2008 Teachers Choice Award and 2010 AEP Distinguished achievement award American Watercolor in the Age of Homer and Sargent Kathleen A. have been revised and updated to ensure that the content of the encyclopedia is current and represents the state of the art. The work covers the full gamut of color: the fundamentals of color science, the physics and chemistry of color as it relates to optical phenomena and the human visual system, and colorants and materials. The measurement of color is described through entries on colorimetry, color spaces, color difference metrics, color appearance models, color order systems, and cognitive color. The encyclopedia also has extensive coverage of applications throughout industry, including color imaging, color capture, display, and printing, and descriptions of color encodings, color management, processing, color, and applications relating to color synthesis for computer graphics are included. The broad scope of the work is illustrated through entries on color in art, conservation, color and architecture, color and education, color and culture, and biographies of some of the key figures involved in color research throughout history. Architectural Colour in the Professional Palette Fiona McLachlan, 2012. This book investigates documents and analyses the colour palettes of a number of contemporary architects in order to respond to these questions and provide an easy reference of contemporary colour use.

Colour and Form Perception: Straddling the Boundary Galina V. Paramei, Cees van Leeuwen, 2016-05-31. Starting from psychophysics, over the last 50 years, most progress in unravelling the mechanisms of color vision has been made through the study of single cell responses, mainly in LGN and striate cortex. A similar development in the study of form perception may seem to be underway, centred on the study of temporal cortex. However, because of the combinatorial characteristics of form perception, we are also observing the opposite tendency: from single cell activity to population coding, and from static receptive field structures to system dynamics and integration, and ultimately a synthetic form of psychophysics of color and form perception. From single cells to system integration, it is this development that the present Research Topic wishes to highlight and promote. How does this development affect our views on the various attributes of perception? In particular, we are interested in to what extent evolving knowledge in the field of color perception is relevant within a developing integrative framework of form perception. The goal of this Research Topic is to bring together experimental research encompassing both color and form perception. For this volume, we planned a broad scope of topics on color in complex scenes, color and form, as well as dynamic aspects of form perception. We expect that the Research Topic will be attractive to the community of researchers whose work straddles the boundary between the two visual perception fields, as well as to the wider community interested in integrative systems neuroscience.

A Revolution in Colour Giorgio Riello, Maria Hayward, Ulinka Rublack, 2024-09-19 This major volume aims to re colour the European world of dress c 1300 1800 New dyes created one of the most important visual experiences of the period yet their story has been side lined by a focus on visual experiences shaped by the high arts Meanwhile theatrical productions and period films still abound with broad assumptions about the growing dominance of black clothing for elites during the period while ordinary people are imagined having worn coarse greys and bleached garments This volume presents clear evidence that even the clothing of the middle classes could be much more expensive than paintings and that coloured clothing and accessories were ubiquitous across society Contributors shed new light on the economic environmental and cultural dimensions of colour in dress The range of dyes expanded considerably in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries drawing on Asian and Mediterranean knowledge new collections of recipes and the greater diversity of plants available through New World trade Working creatively with organic plant animal and mineral materials to make colours involved considerable knowledge pleasure and skill The creation of colour through dyes thus reveals a whole range of global agricultural and craft technologies that can inspire future material worlds and transforms our understanding of Europe s cultural heritage
