

Figure	Conditional (or implied) regression	Intercept
Demographic	Control variables: education, experience, etc. (control for their correlation with the outcome)	These are average values of the variables (control variables) at their baseline values
Experiments	None or a few	Control values: zero
Quasi-experiments	Control variables: x_1, x_2, \dots, x_n (or a few of them)	These are avg. values of the control variables at their baseline values
Without the quasi-experiments	Randomized regression (or, fixed effects regression)	Intercept: the average of the regressions

Values were used based on the regression, where α and β were always positive and γ was always negative, as the regression on the other side of the equation.

- Operate with the most comprehensive representation of the population, which currently is 200,000. This enabled us to find representative, truly representative user populations.
- "Segmented" the population by creating subpopulations, comparing features, characteristics, and usage usage characteristics.
- Segment the population into subpopulations.
- Segment the "subpopulations" and then the users in each subpop.
