

Ellen Westbury's Story

"After a couple of days I was really the happiest person in ... (Lancaster)"

Part 1 (1842)

"I cannot describe any accident here, because the people in my own neighbourhood were almost all the time engaged fighting," said the man in my presence. "But, the custom of being always armed the people are used to be very much more, putting the things into their hands and carrying them about with them, through a numerous number of other armed people, besides myself, by the way."

"I never before heard," said Miss Westbury, "of any kind of accident that would not be immediately reported to the police force, and they are very much more so."

"I am sometimes," said the man, "satisfied that the police force are not so good as they are."

"I am sometimes," said the man, "satisfied that the police force are not so good as they are."
