PRODUCTION AND FARM WORK ON POLY

There is a growing interest in the use of polyethylene film for the production of crops in the open air. This is because the film can be used to create a warm, moist environment for the plants, which can help them to grow faster and more successfully. The film is also used to cover the ground around the plants, which can help to keep the soil warm and moist. This is a very important technique for the production of crops in the open air, and it is one that is becoming increasingly popular.
