The Nervous System

The nervous system is an extremely complex, highly intricate, and very sensitive structure that regulates everything that happens throughout the human body. The main purpose of all the nervous system and its various parts is to carry and send information, and give the body the ability to respond to stimuli. The nervous system is divided into two main parts: the central nervous system (CNS) and the peripheral nervous system (PNS).

Central Nervous System

The central nervous system, or CNS, is the part of the nervous system that is located in the brain and spinal cord. It is the most complex part of the nervous system. The brain is the control center of the body, and is located within the protective skull. Layers of meninges and cerebrospinal fluid also protect the CNS. The spinal cord is located within the vertebral column, and is the main pathway for information to and from the rest of the body. It is a long, thin, and flexible structure that is made up of many segments.

Peripheral Nervous System

There are all parts of the nervous system that are not part of the CNS, and they make up the peripheral nervous system (PNS). The PNS is made up of all sensory neurons that are capable of receiving stimuli, and motor neurons that are capable of responding to stimuli. For example, sensory neurons in the eye and ear are able to receive light and sound, and motor neurons are able to control the muscles of the body.

The PNS is divided into two main parts: the somatic nervous system, which controls the body's voluntary movements, and the autonomic nervous system, which controls the body's involuntary functions. The somatic nervous system is the part of the PNS that is responsible for controlling the body's voluntary movements. It is made up of all the sensory and motor neurons that are involved in the body's voluntary movements. The autonomic nervous system is the part of the PNS that is responsible for controlling the body's involuntary functions. It is made up of all the sensory and motor neurons that are involved in the body's involuntary functions.

The Brain

The brain is the most complex part of the nervous system. It is the control center of the body, and is responsible for all the body's functions. The brain is made up of many different parts, each with its own function. The cerebrum is the largest part of the brain, and is responsible for all the body's voluntary movements. The cerebellum is located at the back of the brain, and is responsible for the body's involuntary movements. The brainstem is located in the middle of the brain, and is responsible for the body's basic functions, such as breathing and heart rate.
