Background

The Nervous System

The nervous system is an incredibly complex network of tissues that are capable of carrying information throughout the human body. The two primary cells of the nervous system are neurons, that actually carry and store information, and glial cells that support the neurons. The nervous system is broken up into a few systems depending on the function and location.

Central Nervous System

The central nervous system, or CNS, is made up of the brain and spinal cord. The retina of the eye is also considered part of the central nervous system. The brain is the control center of the body and is housed within the protective hard skull. Layers of tissues called meninges and cerebrospinal fluid also protect the CNS. The spinal cord extends from the brainstem through the vertebral column. There are 31 segments to the spinal cord, and a pair of spinal nerves extends from each segment into the body.

Peripheral Nervous System

There are 43 pairs of nerves that connect the central nervous system to the rest of the body, and they make up the peripheral nervous system or PNS. The PNS is made up of sensory neurons that are capable of receiving stimuli, and motor neurons that are capable of responding to stimuli. For example, sensory neurons in the eye are capable of receiving light stimuli and motor neurons are attached to muscles that can create movement.

The PNS is broken down into the somatic and autonomic nervous systems, and the autonomic is further broken down into the sympathetic and parasympathetic nervous systems. Diagram A summarizes the relationship between these systems. The somatic NS is the voluntary system that can be controlled consciously, such as movement of muscles. The autonomic NS is the involuntary system and controls unconscious impulses such as the heartbeat. The sympathetic and parasympathetic systems work opposite of one another. For example, the sympathetic system speeds up the heart rate while the parasympathetic system slows down the heart rate.

Diagram A

The Neuron

The neuron is the functional cell of the nervous system. It can send and receive nerve impulses. There are billions of neurons in the body, with more than 100 billion on the surface of the brain alone. Even so, approximately 90% of cells in the brain are supportive glial cells and only 10% are actual neurons. Neurons are made up of a cell body, dendrites, an axon, and axon terminals. When

The Human Central Nervous System Rudolf Nieuwenhuys, Jan Voogd, Christiaan van Huijzen, 2007-12-31 The present edition of The Human Central Nervous System differs considerably from its predecessors In previous editions the text was essentially confined to a section dealing with the various functional systems of the brain This section which has been rewritten and updated is now preceded by 15 newly written chapters which introduce the pictorial material of the gross anatomy the blood vessels and meninges and the microstructure of its various parts and deal with the development topography and functional anatomy of the spinal cord the brain stem and the cerebellum the diencephalon and the telencephalon Great pains have been taken to cover the most recent concepts and data As suggested by the front cover there is a focus on the evolutionary development of the human brain Throughout the text numerous correlations with neuropathology and clinical neurology have been made After much thought we decided to replace the full Latin terminology cherished in all previous editions with English and Anglicized Latin terms It has been an emotional farewell from beautiful terms such as decussatio hipposideriformis Wnekinkii and pontes grisei caudatolenticulares Not only the text but also the pictorial material has been extended and brought into harmony with the present state of knowledge More than 230 new illustrations have been added and many others have been revised The number of macroscopical sections through the brain has been extended considerably Together these illustrations now comprise a complete and convenient atlas for interpreting neuroimaging studies
