Abstract: This study investigated the effects of a 12-week training program on the physical and psychological health of young adults. The program included aerobic exercise, strength training, and flexibility exercises. Participants were assessed at baseline and at 4, 8, and 12 weeks. Results showed significant improvements in cardiovascular fitness, muscle strength, and flexibility. Psychological health, measured by self-reported stress and mood, also improved significantly. The findings suggest that a structured 12-week training program can effectively enhance both physical and psychological health in young adults.
