3 pages | 656 words

There are many personal and professional goals I have in life but it is very important to have specific short and long-term goals, they can be a great motivator for self-improvement. Goals give you focus, motivation and allow you to measure progress. One short-term goal of mine is to graduate from Tri-County Technical college in the fall of 2018. It isn't easy working full time and also being a full-time student. At times I feel very overwhelmed and don't know how I can keep up with both but then I take a minute and think about why I'm doing this and think about my future. Setting goals give me the motivation and inspiration I need to achieve things in life, it gives me a concrete endpoint to aim for and get excited about. A few things I do to make sure I balance both school and work are building a support system and staying focused on the finish line. Being able to talk to my family and friends and listening to their advice really helps me. Another short-term goal of mine is to receive a raise within three months at my new job. I am dependable and a very hard worker, I make sure I am always there on time and go out of my way to make sure customers are happy and satisfied. I plan on keeping my short-term goals achievable by rewarding myself for small victories and remaining flexible. Short-term goals should be small, attainable steps that lead to your long-term goal, they should be motivational and encouraging that keep you motivated and on track. I believe it is very important to reward yourself when a short-term goal is met; this is a victory and should be celebrated. Flexibility is very important also when looking at short-term goals, remaining flexible will help me change my goals according to the situation. There are many reasons it is important to have long-term goals also. Having long-term goals lets you see the "Big Picture" and a long-term positive impact. My first long-term goal is to become a Pharmaceutical Sales Representative. This job would offer great salary potential, benefits, flexibility and opportunity for growth. I am organized, goal driven and motivated. I believe this would be a great job for me. My second long-term goal is to buy a house; this will take time and there will be many steps I need to follow, including obtaining a credit report and scores, saving for a down payment and also increasing gross income. Achieving long-term goals can be difficult for many different reasons. Lack of commitment is a huge factor in the success of long-term goals, I plan on doing some research and thinking about the tasks and the steps I am going to have to take to achieve my goals. Another factor that can make long-term goals difficult would be focusing too heavily on the result. It is important to stay focused and break long-term goals into mini goals. Expecting immediate results will also make long-term goals difficult to accomplish. You should be realistic and realize the results will not happen overnight. I...
