Selling Sustainability Short? Janina Grabs,2020-05-14 Can private standards bring about more sustainable production practices This question is of interest to conscientious consumers academics studying the effectiveness of private regulation and corporate social responsibility practitioners alike Grabs provides an answer by combining an impact evaluation of 1 900 farmers with rich qualitative evidence from the coffee sectors of Honduras Colombia and Costa Rica Identifying an institutional design dilemma that private sustainability standards encounter as they scale up this book shows how this dilemma plays out in the coffee industry It highlights how the erosion of price premiums and the adaptation to buyers preferences have curtailed standards effectiveness in promoting sustainable practices that create economic opportunity costs for farmers such as agroforestry or agroecology It also provides a voice for coffee producers and value chain members to explain why the current system is failing in its mission to provide environmental social and economic co benefits and what changes are necessary to do better

Labour Relations in the Global Fast-Food Industry Tony Royle,Brian Towers,2004-08-02 The fast food industry is one of the few industries that can be described as truly global not least in terms of employment which is estimated at around ten million people worldwide This edited volume is the first of its kind providing an analysis of labour relations in this significant industry focusing on multinational corporations and large national companies in ten countries the USA Canada the UK the Netherlands Germany Australia New Zealand Singapore and Russia The extent to which multinational enterprises impose or adapt their employment practices in differing national industrial relations systems is analysed Results reveal that the global fast food industry is typified by trade union exclusion high labour turnover unskilled work paternalistic management regimes and work organization that allows little scope for developing workers participation in decision making let alone advocating widely accepted concepts of social justice and workers rights
