

A close-up photograph of a car's starter motor assembly. The starter is a cylindrical metal component with several electrical terminals. A thick, braided metal cable is connected to one terminal. A thinner, white-insulated wire is connected to another terminal. A blue callout line points to the white wire with the label '8mm'. Another blue callout line points to a bolt on the starter housing with the label '13mm'. A text box in the lower right corner provides instructions on documenting the connections.
