Abstract: This paper presents a new method for the automatic detection of the presence of a fault in a system. The method is based on the use of a neural network. The network is trained with a set of data that represents the normal operation of the system. When a fault occurs, the network detects a change in the output and signals the presence of a fault. The method is applied to the detection of a fault in a system of three tanks. The results show that the method is able to detect the fault with a high degree of accuracy.
