DISCUSSION

Early maps were the pictures of what people imagined the world might be. The earliest known map was made in 600 B.C. by the Babylonians. This ancient map shows the world as a circle with the ocean around it. The map key explains the symbols used for these features.

The Greeks were the first to make maps that showed what the world actually was, rather than what people imagined. In 330 B.C. Eratosthenes of Alexandria calculated the circumference of the Earth by measuring the distance between Alexandria and Syene. He found that the distance was 5,000 stades. This was the first time that the circumference of the Earth was known.

From a knowledge of the Earth's circumference, it was possible to calculate the distance between two points. This was the first time that the distance between two points could be calculated. The map key explains the symbols used for these features.
