walk without limbs: Searching for indigenous health knowledge in a rural context in South Africa Gubela Mji,Melanie Alperstein,Nondwe Bongokazi Mlenzana,Karen Galloway,Chioma Ohajunwa,Lieketseng Ned,Ntombekhaya Tshabalala,2019-12-12 In a country as diverse as South Africa sickness and health often mean different things to different people so much so that the different health definitions and health belief models in the country seem to have a profound influence on the health seeking behaviour of the people who are part of our vibrant multicultural society This book is concerned with the integration of indigenous health knowledge IHK into the current Western orientated Primary Health Care PHC model The first section of the book highlights the challenges facing the training of health professionals using a curriculum that is not drawing its knowledge base from the indigenous context and the people of that context Such professionals will later recognise that they are walking without limbs in matters pertaining to health The area that was chosen for conducting the research was KwaBomvana in Xhosa Elliotdale Eastern Cape province South Africa The people who reside there are called AmaBomvana The area where the Bomvana peoples reside is served by Madwaleni Hospital and eight surrounding clinics Qualitative ethnographic feminist methods of data collection supported the research done for Section 1 of the book Section 2 comprises the translation and implementation of PhD study outcomes and had contributions from various researchers In the critical research findings of the PhD study older Xhosa women identify the inclusion of social determinants of health as vital to the health problems they managed within their homes For them each disease is linked to a social determinant of health and the management of health problems includes the management of social determinants of health For them it is about the health of the home and not just about the management of disease They believe that healthy homes make healthy villages and that the prevention of the development of disease is related to the strengthening of the home Health and illness should be seen within both physical and spiritual contexts without health there can be no progress in the home When defining health the older Xhosa women add three critical components to the WHO health definition namely food security healthy children and families and peace and security in their villages Prof Mji further proposes that these three elements should be included in the next revision of the WHO health definition because they are not only important for the Bomvana people where the research was conducted but also for the rest of humanity In light of the promise of National Health Insurance and the revitalisation of PHC this book proposes that these two major national health policies should take cognisance of the IHK utilised by the older Xhosa women In addition to what this research implies these policies should also take note of all IHK from the indigenous peoples of South Africa Africa and the rest of the world and that there should be a clear plan as to how the knowledge can be supported within a health care systems approach

Engineering the Plant Factory for the Production of Biologics and Small-Molecule Medicines Domenico De Martinis, Rosella Franconi, Eugenio Benvenuto, Edward P. Rybicki, Kazuhito Fujiyama, 2017-04-27 Plant gene transfer achieved in the early 80s paved the way for the exploitation of the potential of gene engineering to add novel agronomic traits and or to design plants as factories for high added value molecules For this latter area of research the term Molecular Farming was coined in reference to agricultural applications in that major crops like maize and tobacco were originally used basically for pharma applications The concept of the green biofactory implies different advantages over the typical cell factories based on animal cell or microbial cultures already when considering the investment and managing costs of fermenters Although yield stability and quality of the molecules may vary among different heterologous systems and plants are competitive on a case to case basis still the plant factory attracts scientists and technologists for the challenging features of low production cost product safety and easy scale up Once engineered a plant is among the cheapest and easiest eukaryotic system to be bred with simple know how using nutrients water and light Molecules that are currently being produced in plants vary from industrial and pharmaceutical proteins including medical diagnostics proteins and vaccine antigens to nutritional supplements such as vitamins carbohydrates and biopolymers Convergence among disciplines as distant as plant physiology and pharmacology and more recently as omic sciences bioinformatics and nanotechnology increases the options of research on the plant cell factory Farming for Pharming biologics and small molecule medicines is a challenging area of plant biotechnology that may break the limits of current standard production technologies The recent success on Ebola fighting with plant made antibodies put a spotlight on the enormous potential of next generation herbal medicines made especially in the name of the guiding principle of reduction of costs hence reduction of disparities of health rights and as a tool to guarantee adequate health protection in developing countries The Veterinary Record ,1920

Assessing Academic Literacy in a Multilingual Society Albert Weideman,John Read,Theo du Plessis,2020-11-02 South African universities face major challenges in meeting the needs of their students in the area of academic language and literacy The dominant medium of instruction in the universities is English and to a much lesser extent Afrikaans but only a minority of the national population are native speakers of these languages Nine other languages can be media of instruction in schools which makes the transition to tertiary education difficult enough in itself for students from these schools The focus of this book is on procedures for assessing the academic language and literacy levels and needs of students not in order to exclude students from higher education but rather to identify those who would benefit from further development of their ability in order to undertake their degree studies successfully The volume also aims to bring the innovative solutions designed by South African educators to a wider international audience ECRM 2017 16th European Conference on

Research Methods in Business and Management Dr Anthony Buckley,2017 A Neoliberal Framework for Urban Housing Development in the Global South Sampa Chisumbe,Clinton Ohis Aigbavboa,Erastus Mwanaumo,Wellington Didibhuku Thwala,2024-03-22 A Neoliberal Framework for Urban Housing Development in the Global South highlights the factors which predict urban housing development from developing countries perspective providing a guide for countries in the sub Sahara Molecular and Metabolic Mechanisms Associated with Fleshy Fruit Quality Ana M. Fortes,Antonio

Granell,Mario Pezzotti,Mondher Bouzayen,2017-09-08 Fleshy Fruits are a late acquisition of plant evolution In addition of protecting the seeds these specialized organs unique to plants were developed to promote seed dispersal via the contribution of frugivorous animals Fruit development and ripening is a complex process and understanding the underlying genetic and molecular program is a very active field of research Part of the ripening process is directed to build up quality traits such as color texture and aroma that make the fruit attractive and palatable As fruit consumers humans have developed a time long interaction with fruits which contributed to make the fruit ripening attributes conform our needs and preferences This issue of Frontiers in Plant Science is intended to cover the most recent advances in our understanding of different aspects of fleshy fruit biology including the genetic molecular and metabolic mechanisms associated to each of the fruit quality traits It is also of prime importance to consider the effects of environmental cues cultural practices and postharvest methods and to decipher the mechanism by which they impact fruit quality traits Most of our knowledge of fleshy fruit development ripening and quality traits comes from work done in a reduced number of species that are not only of economic importance but can also benefit from a number of genetic and genomic tools available to their specific research communities For instance working with tomato and grape offers several advantages since the genome sequences of these two fleshy fruit species have been deciphered and a wide range of biological and genetic resources have been developed Ripening mutants are available for tomato which constitutes the main model system for fruit functional genomics In addition tomato is used as a reference species for climacteric fruit which ripening is controlled by the phytohormone ethylene Likewise grape is a reference species for non climacteric fruit even though no single master switches controlling ripening initiation have been uncovered yet In the last period the genome sequence of an increased number of fruit crop species became available which creates a suitable situation for research communities around crops to get organized and information to be shared through public repositories On the other hand the availability of genome wide expression profiling technologies has enabled an easier study of global transcriptional changes in fruit species where the sequenced genome is not yet available In this issue authors will present recent progress including original data as well as authoritative reviews on our understanding of fleshy fruit biology focusing on tomato and grape as model species
