Lutheran Salvationists? Gudrun Maria Lydholm,2017-03-13 The idea of a state religion is seldom connected to religious freedom and liberal modern and democratic states However such a situation existed in Norway until 2012 when the Lutheran Church was the state church of Norway A large majority of the population belonged to the church even though the percentage in 2013

had fallen to well over seventy five The relationship between the church and minority religious movements demanded adaptation and compromises from the minority churches The Salvation Army s enculturation and accommodation during its 128 year history in Norway illustrates such a situation The book examines how The Salvation Army accommodated itself both doctrinally as well as practically to the situation of a dominant state church The study reveals such a close affiliation of Salvationists to the Norwegian Church as a state institution that it raises the question of whether a concept of civil religion was implicitly present in Salvationists view of the state church and their own adherence to the church This situation also raises the question of what constitutes a real church The book indicates the tension between Lutheran and Salvationist ecclesiology as well as the influence from the Lutheran Church

Language and Institutional Identity in the Post-Apartheid South African Higher Education Leketi Makalela, 2022-03-21 This book examines the intersections between education identity formation and language in post-apartheid South Africa with specific attention to higher education It does so against the backdrop of the core argument that the sector plays a critical role in shaping re-producing and perpetuating sectoral class sub-national and national identities which in turn in the peculiar South African setting are almost invariably analogous with the historical fault lines determined and dictated by language as a marker of ethnic and racial identity The chapters in the book grapple with the nuances related to these intersections in the understanding that higher education language policies overt and or covert largely structure institutional cultures or what has been described as curriculum in higher education institutions Together the chapters examine the roles played by higher education by language policies and by the intersections of these policies and ethnolinguistic identities in either constructing and perpetuating or deconstructing ethnolinguistic identities upon which the sector was founded The introductory chapter lays out the background to the entire book with an emphasis on the policy and practice perspectives on the intersections The middle chapters describe the so called White Universities Black Universities and Middle Man Minorities Universities The final chapter maps out future directions of the discourses on language and identity formation in South Africa s higher education
