Question	Answer	Notes
1. What is the difference between a dependent variable and an independent variable?	The dependent variable is the variable that is being measured or observed. The independent variable is the variable that is being manipulated or controlled.
2. What is the difference between a control group and an experimental group?	The control group is the group of subjects that does not receive the treatment. The experimental group is the group of subjects that receives the treatment.
3. What is the difference between a placebo and a treatment?	A placebo is a substance or treatment that has no therapeutic effect. A treatment is a substance or treatment that is intended to have a therapeutic effect.
4. What is the difference between a double-blind study and a single-blind study?	In a double-blind study, neither the subjects nor the researchers know who is in the control group and who is in the experimental group. In a single-blind study, only the subjects do not know who is in the control group and who is in the experimental group.
5. What is the difference between a randomized controlled trial and a non-randomized controlled trial?	In a randomized controlled trial, the subjects are randomly assigned to the control group or the experimental group. In a non-randomized controlled trial, the subjects are not randomly assigned to the control group or the experimental group.
6. What is the difference between a cohort study and a case-control study?	In a cohort study, the subjects are followed over time to see if they develop the disease. In a case-control study, the subjects are selected based on whether they have the disease or not, and then their past exposure to the risk factor is determined.
7. What is the difference between a cross-sectional study and a longitudinal study?	In a cross-sectional study, the subjects are studied at a single point in time. In a longitudinal study, the subjects are studied over a period of time.
8. What is the difference between a descriptive study and an analytic study?	A descriptive study describes the characteristics of a population. An analytic study examines the relationship between a risk factor and a disease.
9. What is the difference between a qualitative study and a quantitative study?	A qualitative study is a study that uses words to describe the experiences of the subjects. A quantitative study is a study that uses numbers to measure the relationship between variables.
10. What is the difference between a primary study and a secondary study?	A primary study is a study that is conducted by the researchers themselves. A secondary study is a study that is conducted by someone else, such as a meta-analysis.
