

Friction is a force that impedes motion by its resistive nature. This resistance will generally oppose the direction of motion causing problems that involve static friction and sliding friction. Most friction is the result. Friction may be either static and sliding friction. Friction is the result of microscopic interactions between surfaces.

1. Calculating Friction

In the following figure, a force F is applied to an object. This force is applied to the object F_x which is:

Let's say the normal force F_N is applied to the object, pushing the object against the surface.

Let's say the object is on a horizontal surface.

Then:

$$F_x = \mu F_N$$

Coefficient of friction Normal force (F_N)

In this equation:

- (1) F_x is the force of friction.
- (2) μ is coefficient of friction.
- (3) F_N is normal force applied perpendicular to the surface.

Example: A car is sliding on a surface. The coefficient of friction is 0.1. The normal force is 1000 N. What is the force of friction?

$$F_x = \mu F_N$$

$$F_x = 0.1(1000 \text{ N})$$

$$F_x = 100 \text{ N}$$

In this example, F_x is the force of friction.

2. Static Friction

Static friction is the force that opposes the motion of an object. It is the force that prevents an object from moving. It is the force that opposes the motion of an object.

- (1) A force F is applied to an object. The object is on a horizontal surface. The normal force F_N is applied to the object, pushing the object against the surface. The object is on a horizontal surface. The normal force F_N is applied to the object, pushing the object against the surface.
