

Activity 1: Case Assignment on Characteristic Traits

Instructions: Read, think, and discuss the case below.

Background

- 1. Characteristic traits develop or are learned through biological factors.
- 2. Some characteristic traits are learned very early and automatically through experience.
- 3. Although all traits are genetically influenced, they may require further environmental and experiential development, when it does involve a skill, habit, or trait.
- 4. How do we know that certain characteristics cannot all be learned or pass the genetic biological factor? Using experimental research, Galton's particular experiments showed that characteristics transmitted by parents, like height, heredity, cannot be all the characteristics transmitted from experience alone. In the 19th century, the biological characteristics that directly or indirectly of hereditary factors passed down at the same place.

1. Case Study

Although Galton's study shows no evidence of genetic transmission, his studies actually suggest that the inheritance of traits is not as simple as it appears to be.

The study of heredity is the study of the transmission of traits from parents to offspring. It is the study of the inheritance of traits from parents to offspring. The study of heredity is the study of the transmission of traits from parents to offspring. The study of heredity is the study of the transmission of traits from parents to offspring.

Research Question

What are the genetic and environmental effects of heredity on traits?

Hypothesis

The study of heredity is the study of the transmission of traits from parents to offspring. The study of heredity is the study of the transmission of traits from parents to offspring. The study of heredity is the study of the transmission of traits from parents to offspring.
