For the first time, the Commission has been able to compare the results of the 1995 survey with those of the 1990 survey. The results show that the proportion of respondents who reported that they had been involved in a violent incident in the last 12 months had increased from 19% in 1990 to 25% in 1995. The proportion of respondents who reported that they had been involved in a violent incident in the last 12 months had increased from 19% in 1990 to 25% in 1995. It is important to note that the results of this study are based on a cross-sectional design. Therefore, the causal relationship between the variables cannot be definitively established. Future research should consider longitudinal designs to explore the temporal relationships between the variables.
