Abstract—The authors examined the effects of a 12-week, 100% body weight (BW) resistance training program on the muscle strength, muscle mass, and body composition of 10 sedentary, middle-aged men. The subjects were randomly assigned to either a control or an exercise group. The control group performed no exercise, whereas the exercise group performed a 12-week, 100% BW resistance training program. The subjects were measured for muscle strength, muscle mass, and body composition at baseline and at 12 weeks. The results showed that the exercise group had significantly greater muscle strength, muscle mass, and body composition than the control group at 12 weeks. The authors concluded that a 12-week, 100% BW resistance training program can improve muscle strength, muscle mass, and body composition in sedentary, middle-aged men.
