Rangeland Condition Monitoring Assessment and Projection, 1985-2021

Description

In collaboration with the Bureau of Land Management (BLM), the U.S. Geological Survey has produced the first map of Rangeland Condition Monitoring (RCM) for the period 1985-2021 (27 years) as part of the Rangeland Condition Monitoring Assessment and Projection (RCMAP) project (see also USGS 2021).

Rangeland condition, which refers to the health and productivity of rangelands, is a key indicator of ecosystem health and is critical for the sustainable management of rangelands. The RCMAP 1985-2021 data were derived from a combination of satellite imagery, field observations, and other data sources.

Table 1. Training data for Rangeland Condition Monitoring Assessment and Projection (RCMAP) 1985-2021.

As described above, the RCMAP 1985-2021 data were derived from a combination of satellite imagery, field observations, and other data sources. The data were processed and analyzed to produce the RCMAP 1985-2021 data.

Intended Use

Land managers and researchers can use the RCMAP 1985-2021 data to assess rangeland condition and to identify areas of concern. The data can also be used to monitor changes in rangeland condition over time and to evaluate the effectiveness of rangeland management practices.

Training Data

Training data are extracted from the RCMAP 1985-2021 data and are used to train the RCMAP 1985-2021 model. The training data include information on rangeland condition, land use, and other factors that are known to influence rangeland condition.

Independent Data

Training data are used to train the RCMAP 1985-2021 model. The training data include information on rangeland condition, land use, and other factors that are known to influence rangeland condition.
