

A Tour of the Cell

4

A sampling of the diversity of life on Earth might include a redwood tree, a jellyfish, a bacterium, a tiger, and a mushroom. At one time, living things seemed so varied that the only characteristic they were thought to have in common was a mysterious "vital force" that made them all alive. Then, with the invention of the microscope, biologists discovered cells. By the late nineteenth century, they realized that all living things are made of cells and that an organism is alive because its cells are alive. Even though the life of a redwood tree and that of a jellyfish seem quite different, these two organisms look and function much the same on the cellular level. Now we have electron microscopes, and we can zoom in on the intricate structures within a single cell. We can take cells apart and analyze their chemistry, or probe them with radioactive isotopes, antibodies, lasers, or fluorescent dyes. This chapter describes what these techniques have revealed about the life of a cell.
