

hunger. This paper analyses various reasons of world hunger and the role of America in contributing to world hunger.

The main argument against America with respect to world hunger is that America is spending too much money for defense purpose and conducting war. The current war on terror in Iraq and Afghanistan is causing huge poverty and food deficiency not only in the victim countries, but also in America as well.

Being the only superpower in the world at present, America definitely has a huge role to play in eradicating world hunger. America has a decisive control over global economic and political matters. No other country enjoys the same power over global matters as America does. Even half of the amount spent for conducting war on terror can be enough for eradicating world hunger. It should be noted that America has a major role in the allocation of financial aids to poor countries from international bodies such as World Bank, IMF etc. Shah (2009) has pointed out that "being a major player of the International Monetary Fund and World Bank, US actions can be felt around the world (Shah). However, United States is more interested in providing assistance to their allies and majority of their policies with respect to the dispersion of aids from international bodies are politically motivated.

According to LaFollette, (2003) "decisions taken at one part of the world may economic ripples elsewhere" (LaFollette). In the current globalized world, the argument of LaFollette seems to be more relevant. It should be noted that the recent American economic crisis has been affected many other countries in different continents. Same way American policies and activities
