Aggravated (20 years) and voluntary manslaughter (10 years) are both felonies. The difference between the two is the intent of the defendant. In aggravated manslaughter, the defendant intended to kill the victim. In voluntary manslaughter, the defendant intended to kill the victim but was provoked by the victim's actions.

Abstract
This research is an exploratory study of the experience of women in the United States who have been sexually abused by a family member. The study was conducted using a phenomenological approach. The data were collected from 10 women who were interviewed in-depth. The findings of the study suggest that the experience of sexual abuse by a family member is a complex and traumatic event that can have long-lasting effects on the victim's life. The study also found that the victim's perception of the abuser's intent and the victim's own perception of the abuse as a crime are important factors in the victim's experience of the abuse. The study suggests that further research is needed to explore the experience of women who have been sexually abused by a family member.
