LaRocco,2024-04-16 This case study of Botswana focuses on the state building qualities of biodiversity conservation in southern Africa Drawing on extensive fieldwork Annette A LaRocco argues that discourses and practices related to biodiversity conservation are essential to state building in the postcolonial era These discourses and practices invoke the ways the state exerts authority over people places and resources enacts and remakes territorial control crafts notions of ideal citizenship and identity and structures economic relationships at the local national and global levels The book s key innovation is its conceptualization of the conservation estate a term most often used as an apolitical descriptor denoting land set aside for the purpose of conservation LaRocco argues that this description is inadequate and proposes a novel and much needed alternative definition that is tied to its political elements The components of conservation control over land policing of human behavior and structuring of the authority that allows or disallows certain subjectivities render conservation a political phenomenon that can be analyzed separately from considerations of nature or wildlife In doing so it addresses a gap in the scholarship of rural African politics which focuses overwhelmingly on productive agrarian dynamics and often fails to recognize that land nonuse can be as politically significant and wide reaching as land use Botswana is an ideal empirical case study upon which to base these theoretical claims With 39 percent of its land set aside for conservation Botswana is home to large populations of wildlife particularly charismatic megafauna such as the largest herd of elephants on the continent Utilizing more than two hundred interviews participant observation and document analysis this book examines a series of conservation policies and their reception by people living on the conservation estate These phenomena include securitized antipoaching enforcement a national hunting ban 2014 19 restrictions on using wildlife products forced evictions from conservation areas limitations on mobility and freedom of movement the political economy of Botswana s wildlife tourism

The Color of Creatorship Anjali Vats,2020-09-29 The Color of Creatorship examines how copyright trademark and patent discourses work together to form American ideals around race citizenship and property Working through key moments in intellectual property history since 1790 Anjali Vats reveals that even as they have seemingly evolved American understandings of who is a creator and who is an infringer have remained remarkably racially conservative and consistent over time Vats examines archival legal political and popular culture texts to demonstrate how intellectual properties developed alongside definitions of the good citizen bad citizen and intellectual labor in racialized ways Offering readers a theory of critical race intellectual property Vats historicizes the figure of the citizen creator the white male maker who was incorporated into the national ideology as a key contributor to the nation s moral and economic development She also traces the emergence of racial panics around infringement arguing that the post racial creator exists in opposition to the figure of the hyper racial infringer a national enemy who is the opposite of the hardworking innovative American creator The Color of Creatorship contributes to a rapidly developing conversation in critical race intellectual property Vats argues that once anti racist activists grapple with the underlying racial structures of intellectual property law they can better advocate for strategies that resist the underlying drivers of racially disparate copyright patent and trademark policy Monthly Catalog of United States Government Publications ,1989
