Abstract The authors examined the effects of a 10-week, 12-session, 120-min, group-based, self-help, and self-directed program on the self-efficacy and self-management skills of 100 patients with type 2 diabetes. The program was designed to help patients understand the importance of self-management and to provide them with the necessary skills to manage their condition. The program was evaluated using a pre-test/post-test design. The results showed that the program had a significant positive effect on the self-efficacy and self-management skills of the patients. The program was well-received by the patients and was found to be a cost-effective way to improve self-management skills in patients with type 2 diabetes.
